HOT SEAT FOR BEETLES

AP Features
HERSHEY, Pa.—Japanese beetles by the quart meet sudden death in Farmer John J. Daniels's ingenious trap. Wires packing a 7,500-volt wallop electrocute the beetles after they are lured against round metal plates covered with commercial beetle bait.

"My trap kills about five quarts of beetles on an ordinary day," explains Daniels, "and when they're plentiful, I sometimes get fifteen quarts. I collected fifteen bushels with an estimated 80,000 beetles in each during five weeks."

"By rigging an electric light, you could use my trap at night for killing moths that produce the corn borer and cut worms."

Shewbridge, 531 Necessity street, is an aircraft armorer in the Pioneer P-51 Mustang fighter group of the Ninth AAF which recently set a new European theater time-in-service record. The group passed the 500 victory mark by destroying fifty enemy fighters in a single day. Cpl. Shewbridge, a gunsmith before entering the service in August, 1942, has been in the European theater a year.

S-Sgt. James P. Ternent, infantryman, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ternent, Detmold street, Lonsaconing, has returned from forty-nine months of service in the Southwest Pacific and will be relocated at Fort Meade.

Pvt. William Nataly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Nataly, Mt. Savage, has returned to duty at Camp Rucker, Ala., after a two-week visit with his parents. A second son, Pfc. Carl E. Pfc. Carl Robinson, 23, 114 Reynold street, is an able-bodied seaman as a member of a Harbor Craft Company, with an Army Transportation Corps in a port on the south coast of France. Schlunt, 101 Decatur street, representing the Holabird Signal Depot, Baltimore, related interesting experiences with signal corps equipment in actual combat before junior high school students in Baltimore at the opening of the Six War Loan drive. Pvt. Schlunt who returned from a year's service overseas in Sicily and Italy last July, was recently cited for efficiency under fire. He entered the service in August, 1942.

An Announcement of interest to every motor car owner

When the war is decisively won—
and gasoline restrictions are lifted . . .

SUNOCO DYNAFUEL

MADE SPECIALLY FOR AUTOMOBILES

will be the name of Sun Oil Company's new postwar fuel for motor cars

The end of gasoline rationing may still be a long way off

Bomb raids over Germany must be continued until the Nazis surrender unconditionally. Then activities in the Pacific must be increased to speed up Victory against the Japs. Large quantities of petroleum will be required.

While the supply of civilian gasoline may be increased after the defeat of Germany, a considerable time may elapse before the demands of the armed forces will permit conversion of aviation fuel plants to the making of civilian gasoline.

Improved motor fuel made possible by wartime discoveries

Early in the war, through the development of new processes and plants, the engineers of Sun Oil Company produced the concentrate, Dynafuel, which has so materially increased the quality and quantity of our aviation gasoline. When military demands cease, these same advanced Sun Oil Company refineries will be converted to the manufacture of a new and greatly improved automobile fuel . . . and the name Sunoco Dynafuel will then be applied to this postwar product.

Postwar Sunoco Dynafuel will be designed especially for automobiles

When the war is decisively won and gasoline restrictions are lifted—then Sunoco Dynafuel will be a super powered fuel designed especially for use in automobiles—by far the finest motor car fuel we have ever made.

Remember that name Sunoco Dynafuel. Some day when you are again able to drive into your Sunoco station and say "fill 'er up" you're going to experience the greatest driving thrills you ever had.

Republicans Are Busy in Baltimore

GRATIFYING REPORT comes from Baltimore about the activity of Republican party workers there, especially the women. It embodies plans to win votes for the Dewey-Bricker-Randall ticket on two fronts, which are shaping up splendidly. One group of campaigners is seeking to swing the feminine vote into the Republican column and the other is planning to enlist support for the Republican ticket in war plants as a counter measure against CIO-PAC activity in behalf of the Democrats.

Mrs. Lulu E. Powell, Maryland national Republican committee woman, is meeting with women party workers and discussing the strategy to be used in lining up the women voters against Roosevelt. LeRoy Rockwell, secretary of the Eastern Council of the National Federation of Young Republicans, says that there are many Young Republican workers, that already they have begun seeking support for the ticket and that the program is to put on a more intensive basis at once.

Mrs. Powell reports 117,812 women registered in Baltimore this year, about 18,399 more than in 1942. With feminine interest in the election apparently on the increase, she believes Republican chances in the state are enhanced.

Women state and local Republican workers are being instructed in the "block system" of campaigning. They will ring doorbells in every block as part of their effort.

Attempts will not be limited to women. "We are going to co-operate with the men," Mrs. Powell says. "We are going to stage a campaign which will pull in every straggler, pep up the lukewarm and bring in a good many converts."

This work embraces a movement known as the Ten O'Clock Club, which has a threefold purpose: 1, asking a voter to vote on November 7, 2, asking the voter to vote before 10 o'clock, 3, asking the voter to vote for Dewey and Bricker.

There is in addition to party activity, efforts of the Democrats for Dewey movement, which is well organized under aggressive leadership. This group of prominent Democrats has enlisted the aid of 500 women workers who also are utilizing the "block system" and are concentrating their efforts in behalf of Dewey and Bricker on Democratic registrants.

As Mrs. Powell says, and the Baltimore workers are to be congratulated. They are setting a pace that should be followed by party workers and their sympathizers in the counties.

Two Strong Points And Made by Beall

REPRESENTATIVE J. GLENN BEALL is making some telling points in his campaigning among the people of the Sixth congressional district.

Two of them were impressed at an overflow meeting the other night at Hagerstown. The occasion was the first mass meeting in the recently opened Republican headquarters on Potomac street near Public square, the large room of which was insufficient to hold the crowd.

One point stressed on this occasion by Beall was that the election November 7 is "something bigger than Republicans against Democrats—it is Americanism against Communism." The representative went on to show that Communistic leaders had gained control of the Democratic party and that if it is successful again at the polls in November they will exercise a dire influence in the government.

The other point is one hitherto noted by this newspaper and was posed in a question as to the capability of the Democratic nominee for vice president. This brings up what should be regarded as a vital consideration in this campaign, one which cannot be overlooked, namely, the possibility of succession to the presidency by Senator Truman.

This resolves the contest as between Dewey and Truman rather than between Dewey and Roosevelt. Judging from recent pictures of the president, his admission that he has lost weight, the report that he will not be able to stand in future public appearances there is good ground, as heretofore noted, for looking upon the equation of human mechanisms and the issue this raises between a young, vigorous and capable Dewey in the presidency or an ill-fitting Senator Truman in the job. As the News had previously remarked, such a tremendous contrast is here provided as to leave little doubt as to what measure of insurance should be provided on this score.

Senator Tydings and The "Big Mistake"

SENATOR TYDINGS, who is all out for re-election as all can see from the manner in which he has changed his coat, continues to puzzle many of his erstwhile supporters.

The senator is running for re-election on the New Deal ticket and with New Deal support despite his assertions that he is running as an "independent." He went over to the New Deal lock, stock and barrel in his campaign for re-nomination, exhibiting a series of letters from President Roosevelt tending to show that he and the president were arm-in-arm buddies. Those of opposite political beliefs who had placed some score on the senator's criticism of the Roosevelt administration and the most of its works were rudely shaken when he did that especially when they reflected that it was not at all necessary for his re-nomination.

Speaking at a Leonardtown Democratic rally which concluded a week's tour of the Eastern Shore and Southern Maryland, the senator was moved to admit that the Democratic party had "made a mistake" in renominating Mr. Roosevelt for more than two terms.

Some pertinent questions are prompted on that. If it was a mistake to continue Mr. Roosevelt in charge of the administration, why should Senator Tydings condone and support that mistake? Also, what makes the continuance of Mr. Roosevelt a mistake? The obvious answer to the second query is that some one else, some better policies, would have served the nation better. The answer to the first query is shrouded in impenetrable mystery.

There may or may not be any connection, but recent reports have come to hand that the Eastern Shore is apparently strong for the Dewey-Bricker ticket and that unexpected opposition to the fourth term has developed in Southern Maryland—and the senator made his admission as a vote-getting concession after completing a speaking tour of those sections.

Owsley Places Country First

ALVIN M. OWSLEY, of Indianapolis, is included among the former prominent Roosevelt supporters who are now opposing him for a fourth term and supporting the Dewey-Bricker ticket.

Owsley was minister to Denmark, Romania and Elre during the first two terms of the Roosevelt administration and is a past national commander of the American Legion. So thoroughly convinced is Owsley of a need for a change in the national administration that he is making an extended speaking tour in behalf of the Republican presidential candidacy of Governor Dewey. The tour will be opened at Charlotte, N. C., and will take him through West Virginia, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma and Texas before returning to Indiana for a series of speeches.

"Mr. Roosevelt is not the same man he was in 1932 and 1936," Owsley said in a statement issued at Muncie, Ind. "The issue simmers down to whether I should stand by my party or my country. I have chosen my country and shall support Mr. Dewey's candidacy."

Mr. Owsley's statement has come to the same conclusion, and for ample reasons.

Pretty Thin Excuse For Court Packing

ACTUALLY, as our British friends say, we are getting some pretty thin arguments from the Democratic side. Some are so thin as to be silly. There is the observation of Senator Truman, for example, on the speech by Governor Bricker in which the latter declared that President Roosevelt had "successfully packed" our federal judiciary from top to bottom.

"But that's so absurd it doesn't need comment," Truman asserted. "The Senate has to confirm every court appointment and the Senate is capable of passing on them. The Senate is just as much responsible for all these appointments as the president."

Senator Truman dodges two important facts here. One is that the federal courts have been packed by Mr. Roosevelt. This is not denied, and the extension is offered that the responsibility is not Mr. Roosevelt's exclusively, but that it is shared by the Senate.

The other important fact is that the Senate has had a large Democratic majority and has been whipped into New Deal support on most occasions.

Senator Truman now thinks we must have national planning for the postwar period and the retention of Roosevelt another four years to carry it out. Yet only seven months ago he was on record as favoring such postwar planning only as would be limited to the "prompt removal of obstacles" to industrial reconversion. Thus he is touched by the finger of the New Deal.

Instead of clearing everything with Sidney, Governor Thomas E. Dewey will, if elected president, clear everything with the American Congress and the American people, which is a much more satisfactory method of clearance.

Getting Older Every Minute

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Suddenly you feel nervous about life. Here you are getting older every day, and you wonder what you are doing with your life? What have you done? What can you do?

You get up, go to work, read the news, listen to the radio, go to bed again. And time flies over your head and flies through you and what do you do about it? There's a white cloud up there and it drifts so swiftly across the space between two tall buildings. As you watch it, it leaves you forever, and another white cloud appears and rides swiftly away on the wind and is gone like the first. And more clouds appear and still more . . . and the seconds and minutes and the days are like those hurrying clouds.

They're symbols of Time and what are you doing or making to do solidly in Time and leave behind you when you pass like the last white cloud.

You write a song. You can sing a song. You can smile. You can be brave. You can whittle a willow whistle for some youngster in the spring of a year. You can leave a sweet memory of yourself in some human being's heart. You can plant a tree. You can be brave. You can dig in, you can struggle. You can stick out your chin. You can write a letter. You can leave another letter unwritten. You can repeat a compliment. You can think a little. You can feel. You can be a Man, you can be a Woman!

Once I read of a great fighter who "could never win until all seemed over with him." That's all I know of him, those few words, but what an epitaph for a man. I see him staggering, bruised and bleeding and ready to fall—and I see him conquering when "all is over with him."

I see him fighting up out of despair, driving weakness away from him—and I am ashamed. That's what one nameless man did with Time. He left this description behind to tell of a human being who could never conquer early but could always conquer at last. And there's hardly a man who cannot do the same.

What does it matter if his victory must be secret and obscure and known nowhere save in his own undefeated heart?

JUST LEAVE EVERYTHING TO SIDNEY

Partisan Unrest Is Seen in Union Labor Ranks with Roosevelt Support Slipping

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—Good old Dan Tobin's gentlemen of the teamsters union are presumed to have become so effulgent at the opportunity of becoming the first audience to be addressed by Mr. Roosevelt in opening his campaign in the usual partisan sense that they beat up a couple of naval officers who had straggled into the Statler hotel here after the speech.

The officers were looking for a dance to which they had been invited, the beating being administered because they did not have politics on their minds and declined to answer courteously the inquiries of the teamsters as to whether, as navy men, they intended to vote for Roosevelt.

Ordered to Washington The teamsters did not assemble here for union business purposes of their own. Nor did they come voluntarily to cheer Mr. Roosevelt. They were ordered to Washington by Mr. Tobin for the special and sole purpose of becoming a back ground for the president's "first" partisan effort.

Many of them were drafted all the way across the country by their union boss, and did not like it. Aside from the tribulations of travel these days, a few of the coast unions actually did not have the cash in the till to make the trip and sold government bonds from their treasuries to get the funds together.

These especially did not care for the honor. They cheered, as required, but the way they talked when they returned home, (my information comes from union sources) indicates not only that the affair Tobin was less of the gala political festival than advertised, but that there is dark partisan unrest within the union labor crowd that has been assumed to be wholeheartedly for Roosevelt.

West Coast Support Slipping The best possible nonpartisan authority recently has made a check of inner union campaign trends and returned here with doubts that put even California and Washington in question. Indicates not only that the Roosevelt campaign is losing ground in the West, but that there is dark partisan unrest within the union labor crowd that has been assumed to be wholeheartedly for Roosevelt.

The diverging elements are not running off haphazardly but are moving deliberately and solely on the question of what is best for their particular union.

The Hillman leadership is distinctly unpopular among all AFL people, even those unionists who intend to vote for Mr. R. They foresee Hillman and his associates gathering from a Roosevelt victory increasing power over all the labor movement, possibly absorbing it if he can muster the power.

Gompers Leadership Wisest The old Gompers political leadership was unquestionably the wisest union labor has enjoyed in all its history in this country. His counsel was to make both Republicans and Democrats equally amenable to labor influence, but to endorse fully even such a purely labor third party attempt as the elder late Senator LaFollette made in 1924.

The wisdom of this course lay in the odds that sooner or later, by strictly partisan political alignments, labor would one day suffer political defeat and do its major interest irreparable damage. Even as far as matters have gone in this campaign, it is evident that AFL will have Washington backing to assume leadership in labor to the detriment of CIO, if Dewey wins.

Personally I do not fully accept the evidence that the strongest class support Mr. Roosevelt enjoys, is critically breaking up, but certainly the evidence is sufficient to warn of the possibilities of a November 7 surprise.

Use of Circular Among Troops Is Termed Unlawful

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 16—President Roosevelt and Secretary Stimson own the country an explanation as to the circumstances whereby political propaganda is being distributed to the troops overseas and in army camps inside the United States in an obvious effort to swing the election and continue the present administration in power for a fourth term.

Congress passed a law specifically prohibiting the use of public funds or official channels to distribute any propaganda calculated to influence the votes of soldiers but it has just been discovered that the War Department as early as August 21—which would be in time to influence the soldier balloting—distributed to the troops a circular deliberately written to remove the prejudices which had grown up among the soldiers against the Roosevelt administration for permitting strikes in war plants or in war production.

The circular was not made public by the War Department itself but has just come to light in newspapers published by labor unions where it is hailed with exultation as a defense by the War Department of their oft-repeated claim that war-time strikes have been relatively inconsequential.

Argument Ignores Facts The administration has repeatedly used the argument that one-tenth of one per cent of the total man hours has been lost through strikes, completely ignoring the devastating nature of the 23,000,000 man days wasted or the vital nature of the production interrupted. Miss Perkins, secretary of labor, first used this method of glossing over the truth but, as President Roosevelt himself recently argued, the more you repeat a misrepresentation the more chance it has to be believed. Mr. Roosevelt broadcast this same misrepresentation of the facts about strikes in his recent speech to the teamsters union in Washington. But it was not thought hitherto that the administration would dare to deliver that explanation of strikes to the troops and use the taxpayers' money and the facilities of the United States Army to get across such a flagrant piece of propaganda in the midst of a political campaign.

Underlings Often Tricky It may well be that neither the president nor Secretary Stimson knew anything about the army circular dated August 21. For in Washington this kind of trickery and misuse of power often starts with New Deal underlings who by one means or another way have managed to reach into the War department to persuade gullible officers there unfamiliar with the maneuvers of politics that after all the circular would be nothing more than an informative piece of material distributed in routine fashion.

The administration will make a grave mistake, however, unless it repudiates what the War department underlings have done. There's no thing the American people understand and resent and that's the misuse of public office for a selfish purpose. They understand also and hope that in a political campaign the administration in power might well lean over backward to avoid the doing of anything which smacks of unfairness or lack of sportsmanship.

The president in particular must never let the impression grow up that if he is elected it was accomplished through fraud or violation of the law. It may be all well enough to say that after election these things will be forgotten. But, actually, bitterness and resentment over this kind of unfairness never vanish and serve only to increase intensity of feeling.

Class Hatred an Obstacle Mr. Roosevelt is getting on in years. He has been under a terrific strain for eleven years but if he is going to go through another term of office he will need to begin at once to remove the causes of bitterness and class feeling in America. And the principal thing one hears continually among opponents nowadays is the charge that the administration is really not on the level, that it is morally corrupt and will not hesitate to do unscrupulous things to stay in office.

Such charges can best be refuted by playing the game fairly in the present election campaign. The army circular dated August 21 is a plain violation of law and somebody ought to be prosecuted for it as a demonstration to the country that the New Deal doesn't want to win this election by unfair means. Honesty in elections used to be one of the main objectives of liberalism.

Population Line Is Seen as Clue To Deciding Vote

By MARK SULLIVAN

The pervading uncertainty about the outcome of the campaign is due to the mixed and in some cases novel forces which enter into it. Yet beneath these is a partial pattern. It may not necessarily be an index to the outcome, though it throws some light. But it is a convincing index to the basic nature of the campaign.

On one point, there is unanimous agreement by all polls, all reports from newsmen, and every other source of information and judgment. All agree that Dewey strength is greatest in those states in which the farm population is greatest. An example is the most recent Gallup poll. It names three states in which Republican strength is extremely high, from sixty-two percent upward. The three are Kansas, Nebraska, and South Dakota. These are states in which farmers are much the largest portion of the population, and which—this is important—contain no big cities.

To interpret this condition accurately, bear in mind that a farming state is not one made up wholly of farmers. Such states as the three named are made up mainly of farmers, together with citizens who live in villages, towns and small cities. The prevailing political bent of all is the same, and is conservative.

Roosevelt Strong in Big Cities Correspondingly, all polls and reports agree that the Roosevelt strength is greatest in the big cities—New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, and to a less extent Philadelphia and Detroit. In the big cities, the prevailing political bent, or at least a majority bent, is radical or other varying of left-wing. In the present campaign this tendency is increased by the fact that some of the left-wing groups supporting Mr. Roosevelt have their strength almost exclusively in the cities.

In the American population as a whole the number living on farms and in towns and small cities is much larger than the number living in, and with the political complexion of, big cities. If this campaign were a clear-cut contest between the two categories, the farms and small towns would win. But the situation is distorted by the South. The nature of the population in the South, on the basis we are here considering, is much the same as in Kansas or Nebraska. But politically the South is bound to its Democratic tradition, even though, as respects issues, that tradition has little meaning for the South in this campaign.

Apply this cleavage of political thought to a state which has both types of population. Illinois, politically, is divided between one big city, Chicago, and "down state," made up of smaller cities, a large number of small towns, and a large number of farmers. Illinois, in the latest Gallup poll, is assigned to the Republicans by fifty-four percent.

Proportions Show Close States The close states are those in which the proportion between the big city part of the population and the rest is less easy to identify. It is in such states that the election will be decided. Pennsylvania has two big cities, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. New York has one overtopping city and several smaller ones. But in New York some of the smaller "up state" cities are traditionally Republican. Syracuse went Republican in 1936 when no other city of comparable size in all the country did.

While the political cleavage between the big cities and the other part of the population is plain, it is not possible to take the census reports and deduce the outcome of the election. It is not possible to draw the line between what are big cities and what are small ones; nor to say definitely, as to any one state, what is the proportion between the big city population and the rest. Further, in all the big cities, there is a formidable minority of conservative thought.

Nevertheless, in this campaign, more than in any since the Bryan ones, the underlying pattern is the cleavage between conservative thought, and varying degree of radical and left-wing thought.

World's Largest Bituminous Coal Mine
To Produce 20,000 Tons of Fuel Daily

AT ROBENA COAL MINE—Workmen placing brickwork in slope arch.

By ALLAN J. FUNCH
Central Press Correspondent
PITTSBURGH—Far beneath the peaceful rolling hills of Greene County in southwestern Pennsylvania is growing the largest bituminous coal mine in the world. There is little above the ground to give any sign of the magnitude of the operations almost 500 feet below. Yet even today the not-inconsiderable total of 4,000 tons of coal daily are hauled from the new Robena mine of the H. C. Frick Coke Company.

But if all goes well in the next year and a half, the daily output is expected to climb to the unprecedented figure of 20,000 tons of metallurgical washed coal.

The preparation of the underground network of main tunnels—the miners call them "headings"—accounts for most of the present production.

The reason there is so little activity above ground for such a mammoth undertaking is that all this coal is being delivered to the Ronce mine tipples about three miles up the Monongahela river, a tributary of the Ohio river, to Greene county from the Ronce mine on the Fayette county side.

Work continued at a measured pace until the war. Then the heavy drafts on the United States Steel corporation's subsidiary's Fayette county coal reserves made it necessary to speed up plans for the full development of the gigantic project, situated in a 69,000-acre coal reserve.

Another United States Steel subsidiary, the huge steel-making plant at Gary, Ind., owned by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, sixty-one miles down the river, will receive a major portion, if not all, of the tremendous output.

One of the biggest problems the engineers of the new workings face, and also one of the principal reasons why this two-part mine reserve has not been worked heretofore, is the high average sulphur content of the coal.

Unusual problems call for unusual treatment, and the engineers have evolved a plan whereby the Robena mine coal, when ready for consumption, will be as good as the coal mined just across the river in Fayette county properties.

The sulphur content of coal must be kept within certain limits.

takes place in hoppers which have a capacity of 130 tons. This coal is then fed by ten apron feeders onto a sixty-inch conveyor belt which will be capable of hauling 3,800 tons of coal an hour to the surface.

On the surface the coal is blended, coal passes over shaking screens, picking tables and crushers to remove slate, sulphur balls and other coarse refuse. The coal at this stage is reduced to three inches and under in size.

The coal will then be delivered on a conveyor belt to the top of an 18,000-ton blending bin, where it will be discharged into 168 individual cells for a second and more complete mixing.

The mixed product from the blending bin will be delivered at the rate of 1,800 tons hourly to a washing plant, where still more of the unwanted ingredients, including sulphur, are washed out.

After this third treatment of the coal, the engineers are more or less willing to bet that it is ready for consumption. So it is put into a large tipples alongside the Monongahela river and the shipper to its destination via barges which 800 and 900 tons each.

It will require twenty-five barges a day to keep the coal going down the river as quickly as it is mined.

Answering the Question
"How Much Should A Funeral Cost?"

Buying at prices suitable to their means is a time-honored custom followed by most families. But many have seemed to think this principle didn't apply to arranging for a funeral that would meet with the approval of their circle.

This sensible principle does apply when we are called. Our fair-profit policy makes possible a wide price range—wide enough to enable every family to arrange for our superior service at a price it can afford to pay. The low sulphur can be mixed with the high sulphur to obtain an average which will not be too high.

Whether a lower-priced service or one comparatively expensive is selected it will always be remembered as one of flawless distinction.

Whodunit Writer Solves Old Perfume Mysteries

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Ever since Bernardine de Tuvache, author, artist and playwright, discovered that "perfume was the reason Cleopatra had such luck with Antony" she has been interested in scents.

What began as a hobby of collecting essential oils while visiting the BERNARDINE DE TUVACHE—Her Hobby Pays Off.

Mediterranean in search of material for a mystery novel developed into a thriving perfume business.

Cleopatra, says Bernardine, believed certain scents had magical properties and she secretly blended her own essences. She made lavish use of them in the conquest of two Roman conquerors and even Shakespeare, describing her meeting with Antony, said: "From a large, a strange invisible perfume hits the senses of the adjacent wharfs."

After Bernardine found out about Cleopatra, she read about Nero's Poppaea, Catherine de Medici, Madame du Barry, Helen of Troy and Madame Pompadour and found most of these romantic women were doused in gobs of perfume all the time.

But it was the Empress Josephine who gave her a first clue to an old rare scent and Bernardine forgot about mystery novels.

"One day I read that her perfume had lingered within her tomb for sixty years after her death," she says. "Later, in tracing down her idiosyncrasies, I discovered she was fond of sandalwood, a perfume ingredient."

Bernardine decided to collect essential oils that would create lush, warm, emotional perfumes like those of centuries ago. She combed the Mediterranean for old, rare essences. Later, she studied blending with a French chemist. She got into business accidentally when, in brewing perfumes for her friends, she found she had a thriving business on her hands.

"It's the personality that should be enhanced by perfume—and that's why charming women centuries ago mixed their own scents."

Bernardine believes there are blondes who are moonlight madonnas and those that are bomb throwers—dark haired girls who are angels and some who are vixens. Their perfumes, she says, should highlight this personality or tone it down.

Notre Dame Retains Rank as No. 1 Football Team of the Country

Army Moves from Third to Second with Ohio State Bounding from Eighth to Fourth

By HAROLD CLAASSEN
NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP)—Notre Dame, garnering slightly more than half the first place votes in the Associated Press's second poll of the season, retained its rank as the No. 1 football team of the country in the opinion of 107 sports writers.

The Irish, on top in every one of the polls during the 1943 campaign, snared 59 1/2 ballots for the chief honor and gathered enough votes on the remaining tickets to compile 973 points.

Army, third a week ago, moved to second place on the strength of its 69 to 7 conquest of Pittsburgh while North Carolina pre-flight erswhile runnerup held to a 13 to 13 tie by Virginia, slipped to tenth place. The Cadets got 862 points in the voting.

Although the top ten showed only one newcomer, the standings underwent a wholesale shakeup with Ohio State, the only completely civilian outfit in the elite group, bounding from eighth to fourth. Randolph field, fourth in the first compilation, grabbed third this time.

Others in the first ten are Iowa pre-flight, making its first appearance; Great Lakes, Pennsylvania, Georgia Tech, Navy and the Carolina Cloudbusters.

Ed McKeever, the smiling Texan coaching the Irish this year while Frank Leahy is in the navy, said:

"We expected to be weak at several positions," he said, "but everything has been broken right for us so far—especially in the line—and I can't attribute it to anything else than Notre Dame spirit."

He pointed out that two regulars were lost after Nov. 1 because of V-12 transfers and that a third, halfback Bob Kelly who is the team's chief running threat, also might be sent to another school at that time.

Purdue, seventh a week ago, skidded to eleventh place this time as heads second ten that also includes California, Tulsa, March field, Southern California and Michigan.

The leaders, with ten points given for each first place vote, nine for a second etc. (First place votes in parentheses):

Frostburg Takes Western Maryland Rifle Loop Match

Harry Morgan, of Mountaintop City Team, Tops Scorers with 197--13x

By WHITNEY MARTIN
NEW YORK, Oct. 16 (AP)—They are having a world series of their own down in Venezuela, and they are confronted by a problem which is missing when our classic is played.

It is an amateur world series, and charges are being thrown scatter arm that some of the amateurs are professionals, and although there are some cynics who might come back with the charge that some of the professionals in our late classic were amateurs, the problem isn't exactly the same.

A spokesman for the Puerto Rico entry stood up on his hind legs and said that his team was the only purely amateur team in the tournament, and the newspaper Esto, of Mexico City, taking note of the fact that the Mexican team was under fire for allegedly having a gold tint, paid rather sarcastic tribute to the club.

"Our professional ball club which is leaving tonight for the amateur world series in Caracas..."

Game Taken Seriously
They really take their baseball seriously south of the border, and can't seem to get enough of it. The current world series will run about a month, with teams playing every day but Monday and morning and afternoon games being played on Saturdays and holidays.

They likewise follow our own major league races with keen interest, although in some instances they are troubled with the nicknames of our clubs. The Mexicans, for instance, have a tough time translating "Dodgers," and the best they can do is "Mentiroso," which freely translated means "liars," a tag which the good people of Brooklyn would resent wholeheartedly. Bums, maybe, but not liars.

The Browns also cause some trouble, and the team is referred to by various handles, including Los Caramelos, the Pardos and Los Cafe, the latter meaning coffee-colored.

The Cubs are fairly easy, although the good people of Brooklyn would resent wholeheartedly. Bums, maybe, but not liars.

Frostburg Sailor Is Home on Leave From Europe

W. H. Skidmore Served with Naval Infantry in Mediterranean

By RUDOLPH NICKEL

FROSTBURG, Oct. 16.—On furlough here with his family after eighteen months overseas, Seaman First Class Lawrence Skidmore was better yesterday after being ill since last Tuesday with an attack of malaria. He is visiting his father, William H. Skidmore, Fairview terrace.

Skidmore, who is forty-six years old, enlisted in the navy in September, 1942, and, after training at Fort Pierce, Fla., and Camp Bradford, Va., was sent to the Mediterranean area in March, 1942.

He saw action in North Africa, Sicily, Italy and Southern France with the First Beach battalion, the infantry of the navy. Although considerably older than most men in the outfit, Seaman Skidmore said he was able to keep up with the youngest men in the outfit.

He described his experience as tough at times and interesting when a lull in the fighting and moving forward afforded observance of the people of the country in which they were.

After his furlough, Seaman Skidmore will report to San Francisco, Cal. for re-assignment. He describes his experiences so far in the war as wonderful and says he is eager to do his bit until the Japanese are finally conquered, and then come back to the United States, which, he declared, is more than ever "home sweet home."

Emotional "Reconversion" Difficult Task Ahead of Many Ex-Servicemen

By ESTHER V. W. TUFTY

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON—Just the average GI Joe faces a tough personal reconversion to civilian life even if he is not wounded, has not seen combat service, or has not been overseas.

Congress knows this. And the GI bill was passed in a spirit of "let's do everything we can for them." This Congress did, in such things as mustering out pay, dependent benefits, loans, educational and occupational opportunities.

However, you cannot legislate for "emotional reconversion." That is personal. A matter of adjustment between the returning fighter and his loved ones, his community and himself.

There is a man in Washington who has some sane-sounding opinions on the problems of GI Joe. This man is Col. William C. Menninger, chief of the division of neuropsychiatry, office of the surgeon general, and formerly of the Menninger clinic in Topeka, Kan. In medical circles he is regarded as one of the country's leading psychiatrists.

The colonel makes it clear that his predictions on the GI problem are his own.

Problems on Returning
The returning veteran is certain to find it difficult to feel "at home." Some left as boys, straight from school, never having held down a job. Some left good jobs and will feel they have sacrificed much.

Some have heard too much about lush war jobs, and will look for similar ones—and will not find them. Some have become too dependent and grown accustomed to being fed and clothed under military regulations, upsetting the habit of thinking and acting for themselves.

Some have been living out of knapsacks for so long they have developed a wanderlust and a restlessness so great that it will be hard for them to settle down.

Harshest of all will be adjustment for the warriors who have experienced the uncertainty of not knowing when "their number was coming up."

For some time they have been grasping at momentary things, determined to spend their possibly last few moments living sensationally. Settling down to humdrum routine jobs in offices, farms and factories will take a fine bit of adjustment for the veterans.

"You cannot substitute civilian excitement—a pay-day celebration on a Saturday night—for the every day excitement of a war situation," Colonel Menninger says.

"A man who drives his tank, victorious, the 200 miles from Cherbourg to Cannes will never again have a moment like that. Such an abnormal tempo cannot be duplicated in civilian life."

Would Avoid Old Errors
What can be done? Colonel Menninger hopes we will not repeat our World War I mistakes with the veterans. Let us not give them a lot of flag-waving and armistice celebration in welcoming them home as heroes, only to forget them two years later and leave them to shift for themselves.

But, unlike 1918, most veterans will have seen longer service and three times as many will be among those who served.

"Adjustment does not take place in a month or even a couple of years. Families and communities, like the government, should make long-range plans and avoid a post-armistice emotional slump," says the colonel.

The psychiatrist stresses the need for the veteran's achieving "security and satisfaction," the essence of reconversion. To secure these, a permanent job he likes is imperative.

Meanwhile, GI bill benefits will help him until such a job can be found. But the GI bill, for all its worth, cannot provide what his own family can towards his return to "life as usual." Beware those who say, "Look what we did for you—what more do you expect?"

Colonel Menninger is wary of a set formula of adjustment. With the best intentions in the world, a mother or father can upset the returning soldier by calling him a "kid," when he is very much a man.

A wife can hinder adjustment by spilling him when what he needs is to resume his old responsibilities and again be man-of-the-house.

No Pity, Please

Do not pity him—just get across that civilians know the debt they owe him. Do not make him talk if he does not want to.

The community attitude should be the same. So many practical ways exist to help him, free of any pampering.

A general information bureau where all his questions can be answered is already a popular method in many an American city. There he can be assisted in finding a house to live in, a job, details of the GI bill benefits (many do not know them), and even in meeting other young people through local recreational facilities.

The colonel puts a high value on fun. Keep a man laughing enough and his restlessness will diminish. Help him find the recreation he needs to keep his mind occupied.

The average GI Joe to find himself again needs good times—and that usually means the company of a girl he likes. But the GI bill cannot provide that, any more than it can the ideal family conditions for a 100 per cent reconversion job!

Warrants Issued For Ten Persons In Black Market Auto Tire Case

Two Accused Men Are Released on $1,000 Bonds; No Other Arrests Made

Warrants for the arrest of nine Cumberland residents and one Frostburg man were issued yesterday by United States Commissioner Wilbur V. Wilson as the Office of Price Administration took steps here to wipe out a black market in prewar automobile tires.

Arthur Perlman, OPA investigator, said he "probably" will be issued and added that the investigation is continuing.

Waive Hearings
Two of the ten warrants issued were served yesterday afternoon by Howard P. Loughrie, United States deputy marshal, and both men arrested waived preliminary hearings and were released on bond of $1,000 each for action of the federal grand jury.

Released on bond are Harold R. Fletcher, cashier of the Peoples bank, who is accused of wilfully possessing nine new passenger automobile tires on August 9, 1944, and John K. Rozum, accused of wilful possession of four new U. S. Royal deluxe passenger automobile tires on or about July 14, 1944.

Loughrie said John Wells Cornish, Jr., manager of the Gunter hotel, Frostburg, for whom a warrant was issued, left Sunday for Florida. Cornish is accused of wilful possession of eight new automobile tires on July 27, 1944.

The other warrants, Loughrie said, will be served today.

Yankelevitz Accused
Perlman declared that Lewis Yankelevitz, president of the United Assessor's, Inc., North Mechanic street, purchased 35 prewar passenger tires from the Motor Sales Corporation of Johnstown, Pa., but the investigator added that the latter firm's status in the transaction was according to law inasmuch as the tires were registered when sales were frozen in 1941. "The Peoples" bank here financed the deal," Perlman added.

The investigator reported that hundreds of other tires of which Yankelevitz kept no record still are being traced.

He pointed out that the tires were bought by the persons involved without OPA tire ration certificates being obtained.

Yankelevitz, Perlman said, was involved with the OPA over a year ago and was suspended from the sale of gasoline for sixty days on charges of violating regulations.

Accused in Two Warrants
Two warrants were issued for Yankelevitz yesterday. One charges that he unlawfully and wilfully transferred passenger automobile tires on dates and in quantities to the persons hereinafter set out in violation of tire rationing regulations.

The second warrant against Yankelevitz charges that he wilfully failed to "keep true, accurate and complete records of the transfer of tires to and by him in violation of the rationing regulations."

Warrants also were issued against:

Irvin Morton Accused
Irvin Leo Morton, George and Harrison street loan company operator, accused of wilful possession of two new U. S. Royal deluxe passenger automobile tires and two new U. S. Royal Master automobile passenger tires on May 29, 1944; also four new U. S. Royal master automobile passenger tires on July 4, 1944.

Benjamin Waingold, junk dealer, charged with wilful possession of four new passenger automobile tires on August 4.

Jerry Morton, Baltimore street loan company operator, accused of wilful possession on or about July 4, 1944, of four new passenger automobile tires.

Frank Molinari, Baltimore street cocktail lounge operator, accused of wilful possession of two new U. S. Royal deluxe passenger automobile tires on September 2, 1944.

Ralph Indolli, of the George Street Cleaners, charged with wilful possession of two new automobile tires on May 15, 1944.

Weldon Skiles, salesman for a Mechanic Street retraining firm, accused of wilfully transferring to Benjamin Waingold four new passenger automobile tires.

Sportsmen Constructing Dam in C. and O. Canal
A dam is being constructed in the C. and O. Canal at Town Creek by a group of sportsmen from the Old-Town section and Cumberland, Baltimore, and Frostburg.

The dam consists of a concrete base, steel and wood and is banked with dirt about twenty feet sloping from the top, Mison said. It will raise the water in the canal to approximately five feet at Town Creek.

The water from Kinnerman's run will be turned into the canal late this fall or early next spring and will be stocked with blue bass, perch and sun fish, he continued.

Before Kinnerman's run is cut in the canal will be practically full from surface water from the hillside, he continued, and fishing will be permitted until the close of the season November 30. The water now he pointed out is approximately eight to ten feet deep for one and one-half miles and is fed by natural springs. It contains bass, blue gill, perch, catfish, and carp.

Sportsmen who have been working on the dam include Dayton Lewis, Simon Smith, Rueli Altenton, Peter Faretto, Dennis Crabtree, Walter Miller, Claude Miller, Austin Ward and his son, Charles Winebrenner, and Mr. Mison.

Missing Frostburg Flier Wins Air Medal

A Frostburg airman who has been reported missing in action yesterday was presented an Air Medal by Maj. Gen. Philip Hayes, commanding officer, Third Service Command.

The medal for Sgt. Paul I. McDade, Frostburg, whose twenty-third birthday was yesterday, was presented to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jerry McDade, Baltimore. He was given the award for "exceptionally meritorious achievement" in five bomber combat missions over Europe with planes of the Eighth air force. He was employed here before enlisting in the air corps in July, 1941.

Today Is Revision Day for Voters

Polling places in Allegheny county's security five precincts will be open today from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. for the purpose of revising the election books.

Books will be revised, the names of voters known to be dead or now residents of other states will be removed and party affiliations changed for persons who desire to make last minute changes.

Persons who have changed their residence from one precinct to another should get a transfer from said old precinct, an election official said. If this transfer cannot be presented today it does not mean that the citizen cannot vote, but it will mean that he will have to go to his old precinct on election day.

Official returns of the two recent registration days will not be available until after Thursday, when all registration books and supplies will be turned over to the Board of Election Supervisors, according to Patrick P. King, clerk of the board.

To date, 2,385 absentee ballots have been sent to servicemen, King added. All ballots must be mailed out one week before election.

Lutherans Oppose Universal Military Service at Meeting

Ask Government Action Be Postponed a Year or Until War Ends

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 16 (AP)—The United Lutheran church in America today refused to go on record against universal military service when the church turned down a proposal asking for the ban in favor of one asking postponement of action by the government for one year, or until after the war.

The successful resolution, proposed by the Rev. Paul Scherer, New York City, Lutheran radio spokesman, said:

"Inasmuch as the future military needs of our country will be better known after the war and when peace plans are adopted, the ULCA petitions the government to postpone action on universal military training for males between 17 and 21 years of age for one year, or until after the war."

The original, suggested by the Board of Social Missions, headed by Carl M. Distler, Baltimore, called for protest against any form of conscription. When it was proposed, the Rev. J. J. Scherer, Roanoke, Va., moved its elimination entirely.

Giving voice to a chorus of "noes" from the convention, the Rev. Frederick E. Reisse, Washington, secretary of the federal council of churches took the floor to declare "Caesarism is on the march and the church must do something."

Agreeing, Dr. Paul Scherer said "failure to take action of some kind in this matter will serve to render the church in America as impotent as that of Germany became." His substitute resolution was unanimously approved.

Also approved were resolutions calling for the "re-establishment of moral law in government world order, protection of the rights of minorities, international economic co-operation, and international institutions to maintain the peace of the world."

Two PE Employees To Help with A Book Applications

Announcing that two Potomac Edison employees have volunteered to assist clerks at the local War Price and Rationing Board to handle floods of applications for the new "A" gasoline ration books, Karl W. Radcliffe, chief clerk, appealed yesterday for more volunteers with clerical experience to give temporary assistance at the board.

Nearly 600 applications for "A" books were received yesterday, Radcliffe said, and several additional clerks are needed to handle the rush. Local concerns are asked to notify the board if any of their employees will be able to work for one or two days in the board office, Union street building.

Condition of Accident Victim Reported Fair

Carl Worley, 26, Kitts Hill, O., who suffered a deep head laceration when the automobile in which he was riding ran off the highway on the event the city desires to buy any war surplus materials from the government.

The application of Anthony F. Miller, trading at the Miller Oil and Supply Company, Mechanic and Valley streets, to move to 436-442 North Centre street was referred to the city clerk, Miller presented a petition claiming that eighty per cent of the property owners within 150 feet do not object.

Application Denied
The application of Cecil C. Sagle to transfer the pool room and soft drink license of Richard Wotring, Dick's Recreation, 35 North Liberty street, was refused. Commissioner James Orr said the establishment appears to have been bought by Robert Shroud and that he objects to a license being granted.

An order was approved to pay James C. Shriver $269.06 for the rental of a shovel for work on Fairmont avenue. The council also approved the purchase of a chassis from the Eller Chevrolet, Inc., for $1,368. It will be used by the Fire department.

City Finances Are Studied by Mayor

Post Urges Attempt Be Made To Collect "Accounts Receivable"

Mayor Thomas S. Post, in a recommendation yesterday to the city council, urged that steps be taken to collect $1,620,462 listed as "accounts receivable" in the annual financial report or to declare the five accounts insolvent.

The largest is $7,000 owed to the city by the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Other accounts are Abe Feldstein, $4 for use of truck; Andy McIntyre, work by Water department, $27.60; board of education, Greenway avenue sewer, $500, and LaBell Lumber Company, sidewalk on Patterson avenue, $88.86.

Heskett Gives Explanation
Regarding the B. and O. account, Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney, said the railroad agreed to pay $10,000 to the city in connection with the extension of Thomas street. Of this amount, $3,000 was paid and the rest has been held up until the crossing to the Maryland Glass Company which the railroad claims does not officially exist, is closed.

The latter portion is part of an agreement between the railroad and city made in 1930.

Ralph L. Rizer, city engineer, was instructed to see if another outlet can be secured for the Maryland Glass Company.

Heskett explained that the LaBell company went bankrupt and the city was nothing more than a common creditor and could not collect. The Feldstein, McIntyre and board of education accounts were referred to Rizer and Arthur B. Gibson, city auditor, for explanations.

Pressure Is Urged
A letter from Glenmore street property owners asked the city to see that the sidewalk, curb and gutter be laid for a piece of property owned by Thomas L. Popp inasmuch as the rest of the street is being improved. The petition asserted the work will cost $360 and proposed that a lien be filed against the owner.

Heskett explained the city cannot file a lien when an improvement is for less than a block. The attorney and engineer were instructed to serve notice on Popp that the work must be done.

Commissioner Hunter B. Helfrich was named purchasing agent in the event the city desires to buy any war surplus materials from the government.

The application of Anthony F. Miller, trading at the Miller Oil and Supply Company, Mechanic and Valley streets, to move to 436-442 North Centre street was referred to the city clerk, Miller presented a petition claiming that eighty per cent of the property owners within 150 feet do not object.

Application Denied
The application of Cecil C. Sagle to transfer the pool room and soft drink license of Richard Wotring, Dick's Recreation, 35 North Liberty street, was refused. Commissioner James Orr said the establishment appears to have been bought by Robert Shroud and that he objects to a license being granted.
